WALT Understand the link between division and fractions.
 Here is a picnic that Petros and Michael are going to share equally. 9.3.15

Can you tell us what each of them will have?

Show how you solved each.
 Then, can you show how the division of each piece of food links to making fractions?

What if there were four children?

What if there were six children?

What if there were twelve children?

Show your workings in both division and fractions

WALT: Write a traditional story with a twist.

Little red riding hood's adventure

One glorious sunny day, at the edge of Lou beach, a young girl was at her grandmother's old, crumbly cottage. They were making triple seaweed cookies with extra seaweed and had almost made 100. LRRH and her grandmother were delighted and they were enjoying themselves. When grandma put the third batch of cookies in the oven she realized that they were almost out of seaweed. She asked LRRH "When we run out of seaweed would you be a dear and go down the beach to get some more?"

A short while later, LRRH went to the beach to gather some more seaweed for their cookies. When she got halfway to where all of the seaweed was she saw a Great Dane walking towards her. "What are you doing out here alone young lady, surely you need someone to accompany you on this terrible journey." Screeched the dog, whose name was Norman. LRRH sighed "I am collecting more seaweed for my grandma who lives just a couple of minutes away. Changing the subject a little don't you think it's a wonderful day for having a splash in the water but if you don't then it is your loss? Anyway what are you talking about where's your owner?" Norman hesitated a little and then cried "I will have you know I am taking myself for a walk because Dave is at work."

LRRH stared at the dog in disbelief as she had never heard of a dog taking itself for a walk before this day.

Norman began to take a slow walk back along the Stoney pathway. LRRH was curious to see where he was going so she followed him. As they got further she realized that they were travelling through Helston in Cornwall. Later on she couldn't find Norman anywhere and she started to worry that she might never find her way back home again. All of a sudden a giant squirrel appeared out of nowhere and shouted "What are you doing here on my land that belongs to me and that I never let anyone else on" LRRH was absolutely petrified so she started running as fast as her little legs could carry her but she was no match for the giant monstrosity. When she ran out of breath and she couldn't run anymore she decided to give up and sacrifice to the monster.

After the squirrel realizes what LRRH is doing he picks her up and spins around and then lets her go. Next thing she knows she is really far out into the ocean. She is really frustrated so she starts swimming for all she's worth. Within about fifteen minutes she is almost at the shore but she does not think she knows where she is. "Where am I? What's going to happen to me?" screamed LRRH. Then she turns around and sees a little cottage in the distance. She realizes where she is and goes running back home. When she gets there she can see flashing lights coming from around the back.

When she gets round the back lots of her friends jump out at her and shouted "SURPRISE." It turns out it is eleven years since she got her nick name LRRH. Although she is thrilled that she has worn it for that long she gives it back to her grandma and says "I am sorry but I cannot where this any longer I want to be called Lauren again." Her grandmother accepted her apology but she said "there's one more thing Lauren. I have booked us some tickets to go swimming with the dolphins." Lauren was really pleased and started skipping away happily but her grandma stopped her in her tracks. "Wait one second Lauren there is a gift I want to give you. It is a pair of blue trousers that I have been keeping for a special occasion. Please take them!" Lauren took them and then she carried on skipping to the car. Her friend Rosie was outside waiting for her so she could wish her luck with the dolphins.

As Lauren skipped past, Rosie laughed "see you soon little blue riding trousers!" Lauren was not prepared for everyone to start calling her that but she was going to have to put up with it. "Oh well" sighed Lauren. From that day onwards everyone started calling her that. Lauren was going to have to get used to this as well now but unfortunately that is a completely different story.

Task: Write a film narrative.

Jarvis, who is 22 years old, was walking in the frosty land, exercise forest, enjoying his day off. Shivering a little, Jarvis forced himself up the slippery yet steep hill to get to the top so he could unwind, peacefully. Quietly and calmly, he finally made it up to the top of the some forested hill top with a smile on his cold, messy-chested face, obviously feeling very peacefully and happy. || Paragraph 2

A few seconds later, after staring at the sky wondering what to do next, the young man spotted a long red rope hanging from the cloud-filled sky. He suspiciously edged towards what looked like a big piece of ^{common} rope, and poked it gently. Pricked, he clasped it with his warm, frozen hands and swung it back and forth like a fire swing. What was it? || Paragraph 3

He grabbed the rope, still confused. What should he do? Pull it, or not pull it? Jarvis kept staring at its velvet handle and could not handle. He looked around. He was wondering if anyone had seen it or was watching him. Jarvis bravely but hesitantly decided to... || Paragraph 4

Yes, that's right, he pulled it & when he saw that the sun had been hidden and it was now ^{time} night, he was absolutely gut-wrenching. Jarvis quickly switched them back on and withering-limbed round. Starting to walk, like he had nothing to do with it feeling excited, he immediately turned to turn it back on and cracked a cheeky smile. ||

Brightly, he got so excited he found that he was practically dancing with the rope. Jarvis stood in a weird pose, in a weird pulled it once more. It still works. It hasn't become daytime again. He gave it 3 hard tugs and suddenly it came toppling down onto the ice floor. He ran for it just as a light bulb came crashing down down down on to the big puffed rope. Jarvis picked it up clearly down, as he didn't know whether or not it would ever be daytime again. He carefully put it down and walked away whilst having people around with fear and horror. ||

Jarvis, who felt terribly guilty, now has to go to bed but as usual his mother Elizabeth to ask a never ending questions.

"Oh, I've been so worried about you! Are you okay? Do you know what happened to the lights? Where have you been? Are you cold?"

"I can make you a hot chocolate if you like." She waddled over to the messy kitchen and put the kettle on.

"Don't worry Mrs. Jarvis, I'm going to go to bed now."

Jarvis climbed into his nice warm bed and tried to forget all about it. He knew he shouldn't tell a soul about this... NEVER EVER!

WALT: Write from the viewpoint of the eagle including describing feelings and emotions.

Alone and confused I live among the chickens. I am confused about my home. I feel like I'm the odd one out - if I'm a bird like me had a wish it would be to go back where I belong. I want some answers like where did I come from? Where did I live and who was my mum? Every bird wishes that they could talk especially me! I know I live somewhere different to this place. People say this is a farm they also saw something about birds in nests but I don't understand it. I never did my family of chickens does anyone feel like a family I feel my head is spinning & I really deserve a life like this I am always searching for my identity.

WALT: write a narrative including embedded clauses

A man was going by the name of Sid was strolling through the darkened woods, until he discovered a mysterious ^{covered} red knob top. Sid stared at the top, wondering what it would do. So he walked over to the object, dangling rope. So Sid was quite unhappy, started to shove the rope because he would soon realise what it would do. But, after building enough confidence, he pulled the rope.

Great embedded clauses
AS-S He then stared at the object as Sid saw that the sun had switched off. Sid then started to think of many things, ^{such as} like would the sun turn back on with could this be useful unless if the sun did turn off would he be in trouble. Shivering in the dark, Sid went to pull the rope. As soon as he pulled the rope the sun came back on. Looking up at the rope, he pulled the rope over and over again. Thinking of all the ideas he could do because of this, possibly at last, the idea of elements to pull the rope

It started off. Sid started to find the rope as hard as he can but it was not turning back. Eventually, the curse ripped the rope, tumbled down to the ground with a bang. Sid then felt terrified since he didn't know if the sun would turn on ever again. On the outside, Sid looked calm but on the inside he was quite knocked out.
